Teaching art just got easier.

the Studio SPROUT approach

Over the year, students explore drawing, painting, sculpture, collage, fiber arts, and mixed media. Projects build on the Elements of Art and Principles of Design while connecting to topics kids care about. Flexible lesson plans are standards-aligned and designed to scaffold skills while nurturing each child's artistic voice.

How the Map Works

The Studio Sprout Scope and Sequence is organized by month with:

- Two suggested projects per grade level
- One bonus K–5 lesson for added flexibility

Energy Saving Tip!

- Cut your workload in half by teaching the same project across two grades
- Pair grades: K–1, 2–3, 4–5
- In the table, you'll see four project suggestions listed for each grade band, plus one bonus K–5 lesson each month

Designed with Teachers in Mind

- Foundational skills appear early in the year through low-prep projects that introduce core concepts and vocabulary
- More material-intensive projects are placed mid-year, once routines are established
- “How to Draw” lessons and other low-lift favorites land at the end of the year since they’re lighter on prep, cleanup, and storage
- Animal-themed projects are woven throughout to keep engagement high
- Portraits are scheduled later in the year to allow for skill building, but feel free to adjust to fit your teaching style
